

2-4 takeaways from the video on Kafka

A dream's primary focus is a wishful impulse, which is a desire that you can't achieve.

The mind unconsciously gives you what you want through a dream by elements as: Manifest content and Latent Content. The manifest content is what you remember, such as people, sounds and places. While the latent content is basically what the dream is about or a symbolic meaning, it has two essential factors, which are condensation and displacement.

2-4 takeaways from the video on "A Country Doctor"

Along the lecture, images, condensation and displacement are presented. These three elements help us as readers to make inferences about what was happening, the feelings they were experimenting with and physical details as the way they look.

Creating questions about the text, helps us to consider points and analyze in a deeper way the actions in the passage and the true meaning of them. As well as, their relation with concepts such as "Dreamwork" and "wishful impulses"

3-5 takeaways from the video on Lecture IV.

Freud and the Libido, where the repressed and wishful impulses come from. The libido is more likely associated with sexual desires. Sexuality, has been always one of the more controversial ideas in society, as is shown by Freud "they don't show their sexuality freely"(Freud2227)

Freud uses metaphors as people don't like to talk about ideas of sexuality as they feel uncomfortable and they feel nervous about discussing them in a deeper analysis.

They are five psychosexual stages of development, which stages consist of oral stage, anal stage, phallic stage(Differences between body parts as male and females), latency stage and genital stage.

When someone does not develop all of the five stages can develop fixation , or perversion. Which can develop certain behaviors that may affect their lives.
